

CALL FOR PRESENTERS

Indigenous Research: Connecting Ideas, Connecting People

Greetings from Indigenous Studies!

We are writing to announce our 12th annual Indigenous Research Day which will take place on Thursday, November 12th, 2015 from 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the Benedict Gathering Space.

Trent faculty, graduate students, and undergraduate students who are doing Indigenous research are invited to present their work (12-15 minutes). All disciplines welcome. Local Indigenous community researchers are particularly invited to present.

Our past Indigenous research days have provided an extraordinary opportunity for researchers throughout Trent to learn about each other's work and to make new connections. Many people are engaged in Indigenous research but are unaware that others are doing related work. Indigenous Research Day is also an invaluable networking event for established and emerging scholars alike.

If you are interested in presenting, please send us the title of your proposed presentation and a 250 word overview of your research topic by October 9, 2015.

Contact: Amy Champagne at amychampagne@trentu.ca

